

Sonia Gomes

b. 1948, Caetanópolis, Brazil
lives and works in São Paulo

Sonia Gomes weaves her work over the duration of time. The artist chooses materials that bring with them colors, textures, trims, and an indefinable set of memories. Each fabric, article of clothing, and accessory she uses has traveled its path, was dressed, stored, and altered before undergoing a final transformation in her studio. By combining actions such as brushing, twisting, stretching, tensioning, suspending, and wrapping, Gomes turns sewing into a kind of drawing. Her gestures produce traces and set stages of fabric handling, linking, balancing, and associating pieces in a body that, as if growing, takes shape, establishing relationships with the surrounding space.

Sonia Gomes (b. 1948, Caetanópolis, Brazil) lives and works in São Paulo.

...viverem no compasso do Sol

...vivem no compasso do Sol, Mendes Wood DM, Paris, 2024

A whole world opens up to us when we enter the work of Sonia Gomes, a world that contains all the possible avatars of textile: from fine threads to sturdy ropes, replaced occasionally by cables, including scraps of embroidered textiles, printed silks, batiks and other fabrics, interwoven to form surfaces, structures, masses of decorated fibres, or little antennae monsters that concede nothing to anthropomorphism (Trouxa). The atmosphere is organic in the textures and volume, as fabric envelopes are stuffed and sewn, patched or 'rapaillées', as the Québécois poet Gaston Miron wrote in 1970, resorting to the popular language that was seeking a term to describe 'gathering scattered objects'. Thus, Sonia Gomes 'rapaille' the fabrics given to her; she arranges them and gives them life and meaning through enhanced thickness and texture or replayed graphic motifs. At times, they form filamentous magmas evoking Spanish moss dangling from trees in the tropical American regions (Pendente). But this is metaphorical, since the material proudly asserts human labour, the labour of art. The twisting of masses, the stretching of fabrics, or the raised stitching, all produced by the artist's hand, underlie the work in a rough and meaningful way.

With My Eyes

With My Eyes, 60th Venice Biennale, Venice, 2024

The artist presents the installation “Sinfonia das Cores, 34 acordes” in the group show “With My Eyes”, curated by Chiara Parisi and Bruno Racine at the Women’s Detention Centre in Venice-Giudecca. The exhibition brings together detainees, artists, and poets – draws inspiration from a fragment of Elizabethan poetry “I do not love you with mine eyes” (Shakespeare, Sonnet 141), which in turn resonates with verses 42.5 from the Book of Job, “My eyes have seen you.” Challenging the desire for voyeurism and judgment towards artists and detainees, the exhibition aims to erode the boundaries between observer and observed, judge and judged, thus reflecting on power structures in art and institutions.

35th São Paulo Biennial

The 35th Bienal de São Paulo presents dozens of works by the Minas Gerais artist, forming a robust and representative body of her poetics and trajectory. Wall works, hanging pieces, rods, and some pieces from the Torção [Torsion] series – Gomes' trademark – will comprise the space. As such, the condensed, tonic time and entangled memories of the millenary resistance of black women takes shape and manifests itself in the choreographies of the impossible.

Sinfonia das Cores

Sonia Gomes: Symphony of Colors is an unprecedented installation created for the Octógono Arte Contemporânea Project at Pinacoteca Luz, in which the artist faces an unprecedented challenge in her career; to conceive a work on a much larger scale than usual, without sacrificing the handcrafted and chromatic quality of its objects. Sonia Gomes' production includes 34 strings suspended at different heights, which make up a symphony of shapes and visualities. It is a reflection and a product of the way your own body reacts to fabrics, as it creates objects whose materiality connects to the stories of other people and whose scale corresponds to the reach of their limbs.

O mais profundo é a pele

In her first solo exhibition in New York City, Gomes presented works from 2021 and 2022, including hanging, free-standing, and wall-mounted sculptures. The artist's works often incorporate secondhand, gifted, and repurposed textiles; furniture; driftwood; wire; and other seemingly disparate materials. In her laborious process for creating these multimedia works, Gomes considers sewing akin to drawing: a means to produce gestural marks and compositional balance.

Lágrima

The exhibition orbits around a work titled Lágrima [Tear], which was completed at the beginning of the 2020 pandemic. The blue fabric with white details is cut through by a body that is recurrent in Gomes' sculptures, made of different textures and forms on its surface. Known for her conflicting combinations, the artist builds a convergence point between all the different possibilities and combinations brought together by the memories that impregnate the fabrics. The works follow a process of destruction, and this is the first step in Gomes' method: she tears, wrinkles and breaks in order to build her bodies. This entropic movement is what feeds the artist's radicality, understood by her as fundamental. Losing control of the stories we experience is Gomes' claim for this exhibition; the materialization of the most visceral feelings in the shape of a tear.

The Stomach and the Port

Sonia Gomes presented four fabric sculptures at the Liverpool Cotton Exchange Building. Gomes constructs her structures using only materials that have been handed to her by others – taking on errant leftovers and combining them to create sites of intense encounter and entanglement. Mainly consisting of second-hand clothing and wires, Gomes's transformation of disowned and unwanted materials gives them a new significance and life. The sculptures metaphorically bear the memories of the materials' original owners, tying together their collective consciousness to create a knotty and guttural form. Gomes trusts that every material is imbued with latency of life, imagining her sculptures as bodies that absorb and retell the multiple memories of the 'Other'.

I Rise – I'm a Black Ocean, Leaping and Wide

The exhibition I Rise – I'm a Black Ocean, Leaping and Wide combined works from the early 2000s with Gomes' latest mixed-Media sculptures. The poetic title of the exhibition was inspired by passages from the eponymous poem by the Afro-American writer and civil rights activist Maya Angelou (1928-2014). Still I Rise is an anthemic protest against racism, sexual violence, the marginalization of black women and the history of slavery. The exhibition documents how Gomes uses traditional handcraft techniques to create objects that blend extreme physicality with the sacred and the transcendental. Her later works, especially, refer in multi-faceted way to oppression, violence and the eternal existential cycle of life and death.

The Silence of Color

The Silence of Color traces the trajectory of Gomes' recent practice, showcasing colorful works from her latest institutional exhibitions in Brazil, Still I Rise at MASP (São Paulo, 2018) and Casa de Vidro (São Paulo, 2018), as well as a body of new works, from which this exhibition derives its title. Inspired by her work Maria dos Anjos (2017-2018), which Gomes made from pieces of a wedding dress that were sewn together with seams, moorings and various other fabrics, this new series of work marks the first in which white fabric is predominately incorporated. Despite using a wide and varied palette across her practice, the color white posed a challenge for Gomes - namely in that she viewed it as synonymous with silence. After bringing Maria dos Anjos to completion, Gomes decided on a hiatus from working with color in order to explore her aversion to using white fabric.

Still I Rise

The works were created especially for this show at MASP and Casa de Vidro, resulting from a partnership between the museum and the Bardi Institute. The two institutions have linked trajectories. It was at Casa de Vidro that the architect Lina Bo Bardi (1914-1992), responsible for the MASP project, and Pietro Maria Bardi (1900-1999), founding director of the museum, lived since 1951, the year in which the construction of the house was completed. Bo Bardi's design for Casa de Vidro has connections with the design of the MASP building, as both share the unique qualities of suspension and transparency that provide an open relationship with their surroundings. Gomes created her sculptures from the dialogue with these modernist buildings.

A vida renasce, sempre

The exhibition featured 40 works produced in the last 20 years by the artist. Her famous pendants and sculptures made of twisted cloth make up an exhibition accompanied by drawings on paper, fabric and wood, in addition to interventions in books, household and work objects. Her sculptures' techniques, shapes and prints refer to the artist's family memory and racial identity, included in an intimate and inviting universe.

Revolution in the Making: Abstract Sculpture by Women

Through nearly 100 works made by 34 artists over the past seventy years, this ambitious undertaking traced ways in which women have changed the course of art by deftly transforming the language of sculpture since the postwar period. Works on view reveal their makers inventing radically new forms and processes that privilege solo studio practice, tactility, and the idiosyncrasies of the artist's own hand. identity, included in an intimate and inviting universe.

All The World's Future

With the exhibition curated by Okwui Enwezor La Biennale observes the relationship between art and the development of the human, social, and political world, as external forces and phenomena loom large over it. Our aim is to investigate how the tensions of the outside world act on the sensitivities and the vital and expressive energies of artists, on their desires and their inner song.

It took Ms. Gomes most of her life to realize that she had always been an artist. As a young girl growing up in Caetanópolis, a small town once known as a manufacturing hub for textiles, she liked to deconstruct her clothes and turn them into something different, using leftover fabric and found materials to make her own jewelry.

“It’s part of this rebelliousness that I’ve always had,” she said. “I still don’t like things that are predetermined, that say you have to do things or wear things a certain way.”

She was 45 when she left behind a career as a lawyer to attend the Guignard School, an art school in her home state of Minas Gerais. There she discovered that “not everything is art, but art can be anything,” she said, giving her the confidence to move forward with her work, which reclaims the Afro-Brazilian experience and culture, which continue to be diminished and appropriated in the last country in the Western world to abolish slavery.
